EDUCATE THE YOUNG.

Every Irish-American who has any love for the land of his forefathers ought to inculcate that love into his sons and daughters. More than that, they ought to see that this love for the old land is inculcated into their children's children. Thus, and thus only, will the respect for Ireland be preserved among the rising generations in America. There are various Irish and Irish-American organizations in this city. The aims and objects of each are laudable, but unless they extend their efforts to the education of their children along Irish lines these societies are bound to die. Without new blood no society will live. New men and new ideas are as essential to the growth of a society as money is to a life insurance society. The time will shortly come when emigration from Ireland will either stop altogether or else be appreciably curtailed. Where, then, will be our Irish-Americans, except as memories of the things that have been?

Teach your boys and girls to read Irish history. Teach them to read Irish prose and poetry and to sing the songs of Erin. Is there not more music, more sentiment, more beauty in "The Harp That Once Through Tara's Hall" than in the present day senseless

"My Creole Sue,
I do love you—oo—oo."

When you tell a child not to do a certain thing the child may not understand why. Give it something else in the place of the thing you have forbidden. If you forbid your boys to read dime novels, give them healthy Irish stories to read, and there are many of them. If you forbid the girls to play rag-time, give them good old Irish music in its stead. Don't think you have done your duty to your country by calling the boys Patrick Sarsfield and Robert Emmet, and the girls Mary Ellen and Winifred.

FEDERATION.

The Catholic Federation movement has undoubtedly received a great impetus as a consequence of the recent national convention held in Atlantic City. Those who attended the second meeting noted the good that had been brought about when the third annual convention was held, and those who attended the first meeting have recognized the great strides that have been made by the organization since its establishment. The recent convention showed a compact organization of Catholic societies in forty States of the Union. Of these four were organized in 1902, and five during the present year. In addition it had representatives from 266 County Federations and was endorsed by two Apostolic Delegates and fifty-five Archbishops and Bishops of the American hierarchy.

A few conservative people are afraid that federation will result in a political movement. Don't be afraid. Catholics ask for their rights and do not intend to infringe on the rights of others. Unfortunately the American Federation was not given the due courtesy by the press of the country this year, but that may be due to local conditions.

This great body of Catholic gentlemen, representing the United States, the Philippines and Porto Rico, accomplished what it had undertaken to do. It passed resolutions protesting against the spoliation of the friars in the Philippines, protested against the law of divorce, arranged for the better care of the Indians and thanked the non-Catholic Americans for expressions of sympathy on the death of Pope Leo XIII.

The convention just closed sowed the seed. The harvest will be reaped ere another year rolls around.

WAITING ON THE KING.

On Thursday it was announced by cablegram that the Irish land bill had passed the House of Lords. It is announced that the bill was passed in the form finally approved by the House of Commons. The latter house of Parliament accepted all the amendments offered by the House of Lords save two unimportant ones. It now only remains for King Edward to affix his signature and then the bill will become a law.

The Irish land bill is not all the Irish people want, yet it is more than many expected and will be accepted as the best possible solution of the land question, at least temporarily. There are many defects in the bill, but as half a loaf is better than no bread the leaders of the Irish party have accepted it, with the distinct understanding that they have not yielded the right to secure something better when the occasion offers.

Now let us aid our brethren in Ireland morally and materially to enjoy the benefits they ought to receive from the enactment of this law, and let us hope and pray that the curse of Ireland, landlordism, is gone forever.

ANENT THE TYPOS.

The man who reads is bound to study. He can not get away from studying. The man who paints pictures may be a copyist, a human machine. The sculptor, likewise, may become an automaton, modeling after others. The machinists, the carpenters, the bricklayers and members of other mechanical crafts are likely to become as a class mere machines in their handiwork. History has taught us this. The majority follow in beaten tracks. You can number the celebrated painters, sculptors, machinists, carpenters, bricklayers and other mechanical craftsmen, save and except the printers.

Apocryphos of the forty-ninth annual session of the International Typographical Union, which held its sessions in Washington during the present week, the thought should occur to all intelligent people that every one of its 515 delegates are thinking men. By virtue of their trade, men who handle the "stick" are bound to be thinking men. When Gen. Phil Sheridan visited Germany after the civil war in this country and witnessed the maneuvers he was asked by a German field marshal if he could find anything superior to the German soldiers, who executed their movements with the regularity and precision of a machine.

"Yes," said Gen. Sheridan, "your soldiers are machines. The American soldiers are machines with thinking attachments."

What Sheridan said of the American soldiers can be applied to the printers when compared with other craftsmen. They are mechanics, but they have a thinking attachment that puts them in the front rank as mechanics. The printers are bound to be intelligent, otherwise they could not set type. Many of them are more intelligent than the reporters and editors from whose copy they set type. They are bound to be widely read, inasmuch as they have to read from authors from every quarter of the globe. The mere mechanical process of setting type impresses upon their minds what they read, particularly if the matter is good and elevating. Hence it is that they become good and great and thoughtful men. Countless thousands of men who once held the "stick" are now occupying positions of honor in this country today, who owe their rise to the fact that they were once humble typos.

Take President James Lynch as a sample. Read his annual report to the International Union, in which he expresses disapproval of the action of some of the central labor bodies in boycotting union newspapers because of their editorial policy, the abuse of the right of appeal and the flourishing condition of the printing business, notwithstanding the continued introduction of improved machinery. All of these things are worthy of consideration, because they show that the printers have considered them carefully and not with any bias. The printers of America are today the groundwork and support of intelligent unionism.

Day by day as time passes we see new evidences of the influence over the minds and hearts of men of all creeds and classes. At the recent meeting of the Grand Lodge of Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, Champe S. Andrews, Exalted Ruler of New York Lodge No. 1, offered resolutions of condolence to the Catholics of the world on the death of Pope Leo, and characterizing him as a man who, on account of the brilliancy of his intellect, the purity and charity of his life, and the fraternal spirit animating his every deed, was pre-eminent among men. Surely Pope Leo did not live in vain. Certainly he did not die in vain, when his death taught a non-sectarian body like the Elks to pay tribute to his memory. The Elks are made up of people of all creeds, and their members believe they love God most when they love their fellow-man.

The story published in the Courier-Journal of Thursday to the effect that Dr. Joseph W. Fowler believed that the American Federation of Catholic Societies would adopt a resolution asking the church to remove the ban against Masonry is almost too ridiculous for denial. Such a resolution was presented to the Advisory Committee and there it remained. The matter was not even discussed in the committee room. Only a person of weak intellect could conceive the idea of asking the church to remove the ban against Masonry.

John Philip Sousa, at present the most renowned bandmaster in the world, has returned to the United States after an extensive European trip. To a representative of a New York paper he said: "I was surprised at the wealth of the Irish people, who, while the prices of admission were not popular, came to the concerts in droves." Mr. Sousa is not the only one surprised at hearing of the wealth of the Irish people.

SAVAGE—HOLTMAN.

Patrick H. Savage and Miss Nettie Holtman will be united in the holy bonds of matrimony at St. Michael's church at 3 o'clock next Wednesday afternoon. Rev. Father Sheridan performing the ceremony. NEW ARRIVALS.

More sunlight was brought to the happy home of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Weber, on West Main street, by the acquisition of a baby girl, which arrived last Friday. Mother and child are doing well and the father is receiving many congratulations.

A new member of the Young Men's Institute is in the city, but if all probability he will not attend the forthcoming Grand Council. His name is Kelly, a young son of James B. Kelly, the hustling member of Trinity Council. Mother and son are doing well and the happy father is preparing to enter the newborn in Trinity's baby show at New Year's.

BIG EUCHE.

The Emergency Club will give a euchre at their hall, Twenty-fifth and Cecilia streets, on the afternoon and evening of September 2. A large number of prizes have been secured and a good time is assured all who attend.

ST. VINCENT DE PAUL'S CHURCH. Impressive Celebration of Silver Jubilee Takes Place Tomorrow.

[Written for the Kentucky Irish American.]
PIUS X.

Lo! coming forth from somber night
Aurora sheds her cheering light;
God's ancient church looks young and new,
Her tidings are refreshing dew.

Glad tidings! Pius chosen Pope!
Our greetings ring with joy and hope;
Oh, that we could behold at Rome
That brow thrice crowned in Peter's dome.

All hail! new chief from everywhere;
Thy morn of reign looks bright and fair;
To God our hopeful eyes we raise
For thy long life and happy days.

Oh! holy Virgin, mother dear,
May we hope to see thy festive year
When Pius will renew the scene
Of crowning thee our spotless queen.
